ABSTRACT

A method of improving learning by aligning instructional strategies to knowledge to be learned. The method involves identifying particular items of knowledge to be learned, classifying the items by knowledge domain implicated in each item, classifying the items by brain

5   processing function used to learn each item, and selecting instructional strategies that address the knowledge domain and the brain processing function associated with each item.

EV 069689854 US